

Operatic Society to Dress Up in Ghostly Style

For their next production Lyme Regis Operatic Society will benefit from wardrobe hire from another society rather than from a professional theatrical costumier.

Society member Maureen Yell was previously associated with GHosTs (Guildford) and knew that they had a wardrobe set from "Orpheus in the Underworld" in their stores. She wasted no time in asking them if they would be prepared to hire them to another society and was delighted to learn that they would be pleased to make them available.

As wardrobe mistress for the show Maureen is now making the arrangements for the costumes to make their way from Surrey to Lyme in time to be used for the photo sessions for the show programme and publicity, something the Society has not been able to arrange for many years.

Speaking about the arrangement Maureen said "As I was originally involved in making some of the costumes for GHosTs it will be interesting to be seeing them again. We don't expect a perfect fit for everyone and are getting ready to make any that are needed but we should be able to use the majority of them. The Society will certainly benefit from having them available much earlier than can be afforded through a professional supplier."
